

Lockhart Follin-Mace Advocacy Award

PURPOSE: The Lockhart Follin-Mace Award was established in memory of Lockhart Follin-Mace, the first director of the Governor's Advocacy Council for Persons with Disabilities, to honor her major contributions to the cause of disability rights. The award may be presented to an individual, with or without a disability, or an advocacy or community group or business or agency that exemplifies the lifetime achievements of Ms. Follin-Mace. The award is to be reserved for those who have shown extraordinary dedication and devotion to improving the lives of people with disabilities.

CRITERIA: The recipient should have demonstrated advocacy over an extended period of time and served as a role model. Considerations may include advocacy on the community, state or national levels for promoting self-determination by people with disabilities, and cross-disability activities. If the recipient is employed in a position requiring disability advocacy, his/her achievements should exceed the requirements of the job.
